

Contents

Professional Mariner October/November 2011

Towing

- 19 Little tugs conduct a big environmental cleanup on the Hudson River

BY BRIAN GAUVIN

Trends & Currents

- 40 Ready to go, offshore wind sector awaiting government incentives

BY DOM YANCHUNAS

A Mariner's Notebook

- 48 TWIC: too much time, money for a program of doubtful worth

BY CAPT. KELLY SWEENEY

Industry Signals

- 4 NOAA sends survey vessel on mission to improve Arctic charts
- 8 Some progress noted in deterring pirates, but mistreatment of mariners persists
- 12 With a surplus of U.S. gas, LNG terminals look to export markets
- 15 SUNY Maritime College picks Navy admiral, pioneer aviator, as its first female president
- 18 After seven years, Coast Guard releases proposed towing vessel inspection rules

Contents

Professional Mariner October/November 2011

Maritime Casualties

- 26 102 rescued from passenger ferry that ran aground in Virgin Islands
- 30 Mate piloting tug in collision with duck boat likely to get prison term
- 33 High speed, poor supervision likely causes of fatal Coast Guard collision, NTSB concludes
- 35 Maine passenger schooner runs aground twice within eight weeks
- 37 Silting may have played a role in Lower Mississippi grounding
- 39 Two boaters hurt in collision with water taxi near Fire Island, N.Y.

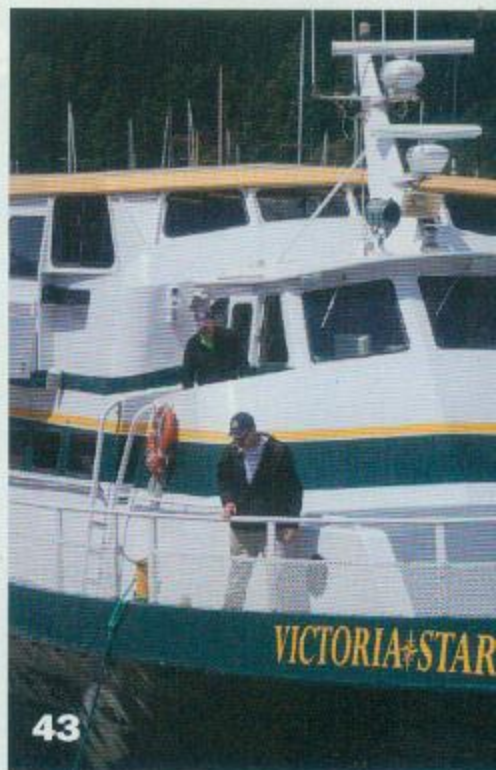

Vessels at Work

- 24 Smaller tugs give East Coast bunkering company room to maneuver

BY BRIAN GAUVIN

ON THE COVER

Charles Burton, a 94-foot, 3,000-hp Vane Brothers tug designed for providing bunkering services in East Coast ports, operating on the Delaware River at Philadelphia. See story, Page 24. Photo by Brian Gauvin

- 43 Victoria Star: Great scenery and good food on a cruise of the San Juan Islands

BY ALAN HAIG-BROWN

